There was an error in the Fitzgerald, D. Discussion for the Advanced Myocardial Protection Symposium. J Extra Corpor Technol. 2016;48:P34–7.

The following statement made by an audience member was incorrect in that it implied that Tom Klein is Vanderbilt's Perfusion Program Director:

“And so, del Nido's got calcium from the blood, now we know Custodiol has calcium, we know four to one cardioplegia has calcium, and then I hear a presentation by a student from Vanderbilt, Tom Klein's program, and they had a sickle cell patient that needed to have surgery like the next day, and they had blood cardioplegia on the adult side, and del Nido on the children's side, and this student actually decided to use the del Nido solution without blood.”

The statement should have stated the following:

“And so, del Nido's got calcium from the blood, now we know Custodiol has calcium, we know four to one cardioplegia has calcium, and then I hear a presentation by a student from Vanderbilt, Nicole Michaud's program, and they had a sickle cell patient that needed to have surgery like the next day, and they had blood cardioplegia on the adult side, and del Nido on the children's side, and this student actually decided to use the del Nido solution without blood.”
